Gymnasium Exhibition

The exhibition of gymnastics work at the armory last evening by the classes of the Hancock and Calumet Y. M. C. A., was attended by about 500 people, including a large number of ladies, and all were well pleased with the entertainment given by the boys. There were twenty-five members from Hancock and about that number from the local association. In the competition race between the Hancock and Calumet classes of passing the Indian club and setting up, the Hancock team won four out of the five races. The individual club race between one man from each team, including all the men of both teams was won by the Calumet boys by a close contest, seventeen races being run, Calumet winning eight and Hancock seven and two being a tie. The excitement among the contestants and spectators ran high while those races were being run and cheers were given whenever either side scored a point.

After the entertainment the Calumet boys treated the Hancock to an oyster supper and the two classes spent an hour or so in pleasant social enjoyment in the banquet room of the armory. Messrs. Lyon, Duncan, Grierson and Childs had charge of the supper and the boys extended the ladies a vote of thanks for their kindness. The exhibition was a success in every way and although no special features were introduced the public was given an opportunity of seeing how the practical work of the gymnastics is carried on at their respective clubs.

McFarland, president of Highland University, Kan., to Prof. Favour: "I take great pleasure in expressing my enjoyment and appreciation of your recent illustrated lecture on electricity, given before our students. ROLLIVER STIRRED THEM UP

Iowa Man Makes the Rules Debate in the House

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21.—While the house was closing up the matter of the new rules yesterday the debate was very tame until the conclusion, when Rolliver of Iowa got the floor and electrified the house that the general reign of common sense in parliamentary procedure at last had arrived. He called attention to the fact that Crisp had said while the Democrats had recognized a good thing when they saw it—for a sufficient length of time. [Laughter.] Rolliver's speech aroused Crisp, who said he had not intended to make any proposition, against a majority of 15, but he could not allow some of the insinuations of Rolliver's remarks to pass unnoticed. The resistance of the Democrats in the Fifty-first congress, Crisp said, arose out of what he considered them, as now, a usurpation of power. The speaker, Crisp declared with feeling, was not the master, but the servant and the organ of the house.

Dingley asked if an appeal had not been taken from the speaker's ruling, and if the house sustained the speaker. "Of course," replied Crisp, hotly, "the other side sustained the speaker, as it usually does; but I was assuming that the members on the other side had some will of their own. Preceding Crisp said it was not the rule which the Democrats had objected to in the Fifty-first congress, but its manner and method of execution. Rolliver pined out on the troubled waters in a few concluding remarks, in which he said he recognized the fact that much that had occurred in 1890 had been the result of hot political feeling and that since then both political parties had grown.

At Free Delivery Towns

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21.—Postmaster General Wilson has issued a general order providing that in all cities and towns having free delivery postal service the postal system be extended to include household collection. For the convenience of the department, however, the introduction of boxes in the houses until further orders will be confined to twenty-five places, among them Detroit, Indianapolis, Joliet, Ill.; St. Louis, and Springfield, Ill. Householders in these cities will be required for their own convenience and at their own expense to supply a suitable box of a kind already approved by the department.

The Power of Public Opinion
